

WASHINGTON STAR (GREEN LINE)
6 FEBRUARY 1976

The Ear

SUPER SNOOPER. . . Ear hears that when Gerald Ford popped by CIA headquarters in McLean for George Bush's swearing-in as Superspook recently, he decided to swing by the two cafeterias there to say, essentially, "Hi, spies." All went well in the Little People's Cafeteria, where hoi polloi placidly munching their spookburgers rose en masse to press the flesh. But in the Superspook, Big-Time Cafeteria, it was a different story. The sights within were declared strictly off limits to Mr. Big. "It's not the President we don't trust to see who's in there" went the explanation. "It's his Secret Service people." Honestly. Whom can one trust?